Inspector General Elkins:

As you know, on January 21, 2016, the Office of Inspector General for the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) notified officials that it would begin an investigation into the causes of the Flint water crisis. This information will be very helpful in ensuring that a similar crisis never happens again, either in Flint or any other community across America. Equally important, it will also help to bring justice to the thousands of families in Flint who are still living with the effects of this ongoing crisis.

Seeing as how this investigation began over two years ago, we write to seek an update as to when you anticipate this investigation will be completed and released to the public.

We would appreciate a written response by March 20, 2018.

Sincerely,

Daniel T. Kildee Debbie Stabenow Gary C. Peters
